

Section A - Respond to any 3 questions from this section.

- What does Plato's Allegory of the Cave tell us about how we recognize things? What does Plato's cave tell us about what we see with our eyes?
- What is Truth according to Plato in this allegory?
- Describe an experience you have had in which something that looked true turned out to be false or looked false turned out to be true.
- How is it possible that people can believe in illusion and accept it as reality?
- What sometimes happens to people when the illusion is shattered and reality is revealed?
- Describe other "caves" in modern life in which people might be "imprisoned" or feel "imprisoned."
- To what extent do you find Socrates point about human tendency to confuse "shadows" with "reality" relevant today?
- What could be the elements that prevent people from seeing the truth, or regarding "shadow" as the "truth"?
- What are some things the allegory suggests about the process of enlightenment or education?
- What do the imagery of "shackles" and the "cave" suggest about the perspective of the cave dwellers or prisoners?
- In society today or in your own life, what sorts of things shackle the mind?
- According to the allegory, how do cave prisoners get free? What does this suggest about intellectual freedom?
- The allegory presupposes that there is a distinction between appearances and reality. Do you agree? Why or why not?

Section B - Journal Assignment:

Write one page discussing your ideas using what you have learned from the "Allegory of the Cave." Be sure to discuss this situation in terms of sight, vision, blindness, truth, reality, illusion, light, and dark as it is appropriate.
